With Guest Speaker Na'ama Ore
"Israeli Americans as a motivating force in the Jewish community"

Na'ama Ore is the Regional Director in Boston of the Israeli American Council. She established the Boston branch in 2014 and has focused on building a strong Israeli-American community that is taking responsibility to strengthen the next generation's Jewish and Israeli identity. Together with the broad Boston Jewish community, she is building partnerships and strategic steps to unite and benefit from one another and together to strengthen the State of Israel.

Previously, for the past 17 years, she worked in the Clalit Health Services in various senior positions such as Operations, Quality, and Strategic Planning. From 2005-2012 she has been an active member and a local chairperson in Ladies Circle International (LCI), a voluntary worldwide organization that provides support for the underprivileged in the local communities of each chapter. Ore earned a Master in Public Administration (MPA) from the Kennedy School at Harvard University.
